Election/Restrictions

1. This application contains claims directed to the following patentably distinct species of the claimed invention:

- 1. Species of the embodiment disclosed on page 4, lines 21-25 and page 5, lines 1-13; in particular, the present invention will be attained by an image forming device including image data generation means, compression means, memory means, printing engine, a determining means, decompressing means, and transfer means. The image data generation means is adapted for generating image data from original data. The compression means is adapted for compressing the image data generated by the image data generation means. The memory means is adapted for storing the image data compressed by the compression means. The a printing engine provides a plurality of different printing speed for printing an image on an image recording medium. The determining means is adapted for determining the printing speed based on an amount of the compressed image data stored in the memory means. The decompressing means is adapted for decompressing the compressed image data stored in the memory means. The transfer means is adapted for transferring the image data decompressed by the decompressing means to the printing engine.
- II. Species of the embodiment disclosed on page 5, lines 14-23; in particular, there is provided an image forming device including the image data generation means, the compression means, the printing engine, the memory means, the decompressing means, the transfer means, and a printing speed determining means. The printing speed determining means is adapted for predicting compressed data volume based on the image data generated by the image data generation means and selecting one of the printing speed among the plurality of different printing speed based on the predicted compressed data volume.

The species are independent or distinct because claims to the different species recite the mutually exclusive characteristics of such species. In addition, these species are not obvious variants of each other based on the current record.

Applicant is required under 35 U.S.C. 121 to elect a single disclosed species for prosecution on the merits to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. Currently, no claims are generic.

There is an examination and search burden for these patentably distinct species due to their mutually exclusive characteristics. The species require a different field of search (e.g., searching different classes/subclasses or electronic resources, or employing different search queries); and/or the prior art applicable to one species would not likely applicable to another species; and/or the species are likely to raise different non-prior art issues under U.S.C. 101 and/or 35 U.S.C. 112 first paragraph.

Applicant is advised that a reply to this requirement must include an identification of the species that is elected consonant with this requirement, and a listing of all claims readable thereon, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered nonresponsive unless accompanied by an election.

Art Unit: 2625

The election of the species may be made with or without traverse. To preserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the election of species requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse. Traversal must be presented at the time of election in order to be considered timely. Failure to timely traverse the requirement will result in the loss of right to petition under 37 CFR 1.144. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which of these claims are readable on the elected species.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) of the other invention.
